The objective of this course is to help students develop a general practice framework based on a critical analysis of the structural context of personal and social problems. The course aims to increase students' knowledge of and analytical skills in working with individuals, families, and groups around the intersecting vectors of gender, race, class, age, disability, and sexual orientation.

COURSE OBJECTIVES:

1. To examine theoretical and practice contributions to structural approaches within an historical context.
2. To examine the function of ideology in shaping ways that individual and social problems are constructed, perceived, defined, and addressed through practice responses.
3. To examine ways of redefining/renaming "social problems" from a structural perspective.
4. To critically examine one’s own personal value orientations and practices that are linked to the maintenance and perpetuation of oppression.
5. To develop a structural theoretical framework for social analysis and social work intervention with individuals, families, and groups.
6. To develop a critical awareness of worker social location, professional ethics, and power within the helping relationship and to identify attitudes, behaviours, and practices that contribute to anti-oppressive practice and empowerment.
COURSE STRUCTURE:
This course will include a combination of lecture, seminar, small group presentations and action based learning. Class members are expected to attend every class, to complete required readings prior to class, and to arrive in class prepared to participate.

There is an expectation that differing opinions, analyses, and life experiences will be discussed in a respectful manner. Such an exchange contributes to the learning of all and requires the development of emotion regulation, a skill very important to the practice of social work at the master of social work level.

REQUIRED READINGS:
Please see the recommended readings listed within the course schedule. Note: the reading list may be revised and updated by the Instructor. One week’s advance notice will be provided for any changes made.

ASSIGNMENTS

Submitting Assignments:
Please submit directly to the instructor on due dates. Alternatively, hand in to the office drop box. Items will be date-stamped and distributed to the appropriate mailbox throughout the day.

Return of marked student assignments:
Instructors coordinate the return of marked assignments. The options are as follows: a) the instructor returns the paper to students in class; b) if the paper has been submitted electronically, the instructor will mark it on-line (with track changes) and return to the student on-line; c) the instructor returns the paper to the student by snail mail (the student provides a self-stamped, addressed envelope to the instructor).

Late assignments:
Extensions must be requested in advance of the due date of the assignment. Grades may be reduced by one point for each day (including weekends) late unless an emergency outside the control of the student prevents meeting deadline. Assignments must be handed at the beginning of class on the due date.

Course Assignments, Due Dates, and Grading:

Assignment #1: ‘Personal’ Social Theory Statement (10%)
In this assignment, you will describe your own ‘basic social theory’ on life. Your social theory is likely to be influenced by your social location and by your social identity. Make sure to include some thoughts on the ways in which who you are in society contributes to your beliefs about society, culture, identity, human efficacy/agency, etc. Briefly describe the implications of your social theory (strengths and challenges) to developing an anti-oppressive practice framework. The statement should be no longer than one page, double-spaced and take no longer than 3-5 minutes to present. You will have the opportunity to share your statement in a Sharing Circle on week 2.

Assignment #2: Personal Reflections (20%)
Complete the one page “Reflection Log” as identified in the course schedule (weeks 2-10). Come to each class prepared to share your reflection highlights, related to the topic. Refer to the “SOWK 505 Reflections” hand-out. To be completed prior to the class and submitted to the instructor at the end of each class.

Assignment #3: Group Presentations (20%)
The class will divide into 4 groups. Each group will select a topic of relevance to the field. This may be a controversial topic, a social problem, a practice issue that has long stirred controversy in the field, something social workers encounter every day in their work, etc. A few possible examples include: evidence based practice vs. another practice framework; working with clients from an intersectionality perspective; mental health and addictions practice; child welfare practice; social determinants of health; end of life care; genetic counseling; social justice vs. human rights; work with newcomer and immigrant families; conceptualizing clients as members of marginalized populations vs. another framework, etc.
The group will then describe the problem, answering the following questions: 1) How has this problem/issue typically been framed in social work? 2) What has typically been social work’s response to the problem? 3) How might social theory be used to change the problem’s conceptualization and response? 4) What are some possible strategies that might begin to mitigate the problem? These strategies may be at an agency, community, provincial, national, or international level. If possible, show the class rather than tell the class how these solutions might work. While presenting on serious topics, groups should feel that they can incorporate into their presentations humor; current popular culture/media clips; Power Point or other presentation format; role plays/skits; and other techniques that help to engage the audience. Each group will present on its topic for ½ of the class period. Groups will be evaluated on: 1) coherence/preparation of the presentation; 2) engagement of audience members; and 3) meaningful participation of all group members. Length: 1.5 hours—throughout classes in November

Assignment #4: Analysis and Integration of Practice (40%)
Select one option below:

Option A- Return to your social theory statement and expand or change aspects of it drawing on the material from the course. Show how you have integrated the learning by providing examples or sharing insights.

OR

Option B- Choose an aspect of practice that interests and/or challenges you. Describe the values and theories related to practice. Draw on the material from class to analyze and critique the practice.

OR

Option C- Develop your own paper related to your area of research related to practice. Provide a written proposal (a paragraph) stating your idea for a final paper and submit it to the instructor for approval.

In all of the above, you might consider the following points if they apply:
- How are clients / communities / societal problems defined and constructed? Discuss how and why you might accept or challenge these definitions.
- Think about how current tensions in social work as a profession affect your practice.
- Consider how the organization in which you practice (or have practiced, or will practice) influences both the definition of the “problem” and the practice responses to it.
- What values influence your work? What values would you want to influence your work?
- What theoretical framework(s) are you/were you expected to use?
- Who is best served by these frameworks? Who is not well served by the framework(s)?
- What critical framework(s) might you use to critique or direct your practice?

Maximum 8 pages double-spaced, APA 5th Ed. formatting. Due November 27, 2014

Class participation (10%)
I am expecting from you: regular attendance, promptness, informed participation in class discussions, active participation in facilitation exercises, and demonstrated engagement with the members of your sub-group and assigned course readings. The evaluation of your participation grade will take into consideration the following: your contributions to classroom based discussion, sharing and collaborating as well as asking questions, proposing solutions and partaking in action based learning process. I expect a courtesy contact should you need to miss any scheduled class and to develop an alternative way to address the assigned weekly
If you miss a class and do not make contact prior as required, 1.5 marks will be deducted from your participation total.

COURSE POLICIES [attendance, participation, academic dishonesty]:

Excerpt from the UBC calendar:

Regular attendance is expected of students in all their classes (including lectures, laboratories, tutorials, seminars, etc.). Students who neglect their academic work and assignments may be excluded from the final examinations. Students who are unavoidably absent because of illness or disability should report to their instructors on return to classes.

The University accommodates students with disabilities who have registered with the Disability Resource Centre. The University accommodates students whose religious obligations conflict with attendance, submitting assignments, or completing scheduled tests and examinations. Please let your instructor know in advance, preferably in the first week of class, if you will require any accommodation on these grounds. Students who plan to be absent for varsity athletics, family obligations, or other similar commitments, cannot assume they will be accommodated, and should discuss their commitments with the instructor before the drop date.

It is recommended that students retain a copy of all submitted assignments (in case of loss) and should also retain all their marked assignments in case they wish to apply for a Review of Assigned Standing. Students have the right to view their marked examinations with their instructor, providing they apply to do so within a month of receiving their final grades. This review is for pedagogic purposes. The examination remains the property of the university.

Academic Dishonesty:

Please review the UBC Calendar “Academic regulations” for the university policy on cheating, plagiarism, and other forms of academic dishonesty. Also visit www.arts.ubc.ca and go to the students’ section for useful information on avoiding plagiarism and on correct documentation.

- Students who miss more than 3 classes may be refused the right to hand in a final assignment. Attendance sheets must be signed during each class.
- Participation is expected of all students beyond simple attendance. Students are expected to read all of the assigned readings before every class and to come to class prepared to discuss the material.
- Students who use electronic devices to aid in their learning process (e.g. laptop computers) must have the permission of the instructor to use the device and, if permission is granted, must have the wireless capacity of the device turned off. All cell phones must be turned off.
